Hi [REDACTED]

Thanks for your message. This will be from Jen Smith I think. I'm not sure I'm comfortable with the phraseology of the first tweet but probably agree with the warning & sentiment about parents being cautious about which providers children are sent to. The second two seem ok as both are reasonable with the second point being factual.

I'm not going to respond to or engage with the Tweets or Tweeter but do please feel free to pass on the advice above.

Dear [REDACTED],

Thank you for your message and for forwarding the email and draft EOTAS resource to [REDACTED]

Unlicensed and unregulated' ALP provision is springing up by 'unscrupulous people' offering 'damaging provision'. Gets better and better...

"The majority of pupils in alternative provision do not have an EHCP." Bristol's head of AP in a Sendias meeting right now.

As a [REDACTED] we work to Minimum Standards. We have to ensure that the information, advice and support which we provide is impartial and that we are independent. In light of this, I am not sure that it is appropriate or helpful for [REDACTED] to post any tweets in response to those posted. I am notifying you however in case you feel that it might be helpful to respond or remind families of the catalogue of alternative providers maintained by the LA.

Again, thank you so much for coming and sharing your knowledge and experience in such a helpful way. We really do appreciate it.

Best wishes,

[REDACTED]

Im more than happy to contact [REDACTED] and challenge her about this – very frustrating -- they were saying that they want to be able to check stuff that we put on the LO – [REDACTED] saying that even signposting [REDACTED] week was triggering

So I am more than happy in the spirit of the openness that we are now meant to have – to go back and raise this as a concern with [REDACTED]

In fact Id like to – once Ive calmed down a bit --but would like your approval first – I'll even [REDACTED] and say here's an example of challenging conversations that we need to have and ask for her insight.

Hope the workshop went well today. FYI.....

[REDACTED] just made me aware of this. [REDACTED] has not mentioned they were running surveys, but she did mention in an email yesterday that they were planning to run some workshops to ask parents about progress, but indicated that was in relation to the new plan development. The caption below the survey link lacks balance and therefore likely to attract negative responses....

Instead of an apple 🍏 a day, how about a survey a day?! ✍️

We need to hear back from parents and carers about how local services are working. We need to know the good 😊 the bad 😞 and the ugly 😡!

We will be sharing this information with Ofsted when they come back to reinspect SEND services in Bristol.

We have 5 surveys, the first is about accountability in Bristol - please make your voice heard!
